KU Key Words

Freedom and Autonomy
Kyoto University values freedom and autonomy in research that conforms to high ethical standards, and believes in promoting a disciplinarily diverse spectrum of research, while also pursuing an integrated, multidisciplinary approach.

Self-Reliance and Self-Respect
The principles of self-reliance and self-respect are key elements in Kyoto University’s academic approach. Guided by those concepts, students and researches are encouraged to be bold, independent, and creative in their study and research.

The Hakubi Project
A unique program to foster outstanding young researchers, the Hakubi Project recruits twenty international researchers per year as associate and assistant professors, and gives them the valuable opportunity to devote themselves entirely to their research.
The John Mung Program

A program to support mid- and long-term research by junior faculty members at leading academic institutions overseas. Since 2013, the program is also open to students and non-teaching staff members.

2x by 2020

2x by 2020 (Double by Twenty-Twenty) is the slogan of Kyoto University’s new international strategy, by means of which the university aims to double its international indices in research, education, and international service by the year 2020.

Kyoto: The Academic Center of Japan

Kyoto has a long history as a university town. In the Heian period (794-1185), when Kyoto was the nation’s capital, it was the location of an imperial institution of higher education called the Daigaku-ryō. Comparable to today’s national universities, staff members at the Daigakuk-ryo held posts equivalent to the current positions of university president, teaching staff, and administrative staff, and departments within the institution were also the equivalent of current university faculties. At present, Kyoto embraces thirty-eight institutions of higher education, making it one of the most concentrated academic centers in Japan.
