

The Second Conference on

Contemporary Philosophy in East Asia

August 28 - 29, 2014

Kyoto University, Kyoto, Japan

The 2nd CCPEA aims to convene scholars, students and those interested in contemporary philosophy in East Asia to discuss and share the experience of shaping a new type of philosophy in this region. It follows the spirit of the first CCPEA held in the Academia Sinica, Taipei, in 2012. It is hoped that CCPEA would become an international platform for philosophical discussion in East Asia.

Topics:

Contemporary philosophy, broadly construed: philosophy of language, mind, action, society, art, law, logic, mathematics, science, technology, and religion; applied philosophy and ethics; analytic Asian philosophy, comparative philosophy, metaphysics, epistemology and so on. Analytic, continental and any other approaches are equally welcomed.

Keynote Speakers: In-Rae Cho
(Seoul National University, Korea)

Wan-Chuan Fang
(Academia Sinica, Taiwan)

Leon Horsten
(University of Bristol, UK)

Masahiko Mizutani
(Kyoto University, Japan)

Saranindranath Tagore
(National University of Singapore, Singapore)

Official language: English

Call for Abstracts

Abstract Deadline: April 25, 2014

Admission to the conference is free, and no booking is required.

Further information: <http://www.cape.bun.kyoto-u.ac.jp/ccpea2014>

Contact: ccpea2014@bun.kyoto-u.ac.jp

Organized by Center for Applied Philosophy & Ethics (CAPE), Graduate School of Letters, Kyoto University

Center for Applied Philosophy & Ethics
Graduate School of Letters
Kyoto University

Philosopher's Path
Within walking distance of Kyoto University, the "Philosopher's Path" was named after Kitano Nishida, the founder of the philosophical movement now known as the 'Kyoto school'. He served as professor of philosophy at Kyoto University for many years. There is a legend that he liked to philosophise whilst walking along streets such as this charming canal side walk.