Institute for the Promotion of Excellence in Higher Education
UNIVERSITY FACILITIES

INTERNATIONAL HOUSES

Kyoto University, in order to contribute to the promotion of international research and educational exchanges, has established “International Houses” as housing facilities for foreign students and researchers.

These International Houses, however, are not simply housing facilities for foreigners; they are also serving as sites for interaction between the foreign students/researchers, university associates and the people of Kyoto.

There are three International Houses in our university; in Shugakuin, Uji, and Ohbaku.

KYOTO UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

The Kyoto University Library was established more than 100 years ago in 1899. The number of books and periodicals has increased year by year, and now numbers 860,000 books and 20,500 periodicals. In addition to the regular types of books and periodicals, it has acquired new publications to keep up with various changes both in academic fields and University organizations, such as e-journals, database, visual materials (available in the Media Commons), and others. It also offers various library services through the Internet.

(All libraries on campus contain a total of 6,020,000 books and 78,900 periodicals).

UNIVERSITY HOSPITAL

The Kyoto University Hospital was established in 1899 as attached to Kyoto Imperial University. With the incorporation of the Chest Diseases Research Institute in April of 1998, the University Hospital has become a general hospital which covers a large number of medical examinations and treatments, and it offers top-level medical services for the people in and around Kyoto. The current number of beds are 1240, and as of 2003, inpatients are about 354,000 and outpatients about 571,000.

In April 2001, the Translational Research Center was established for fundamental research and its application to human beings. In January 2003, the Post Graduate Clinical Education Center was established where medical trainees are supposed, through the clinical training program, to cultivate themselves, and to deepen their understanding of primary medical care, and to acquire and develop a holistic attitude towards the examination of their patients.

The hospital began its program of Living-donor liver transplantations in 1990. As of June 2004, Living-donor liver transplantations reached 1,000 cases, setting a world record. About 40% of all the transplantation operations in Japan have been carried out, making Kyoto University Hospital a world leader in this field.
