

Professor Position in the Research Section of Crustal Activity Information, Disaster Prevention Research Institute, Kyoto University

July 13, 2026

The Disaster Prevention Research Institute (DPRI), Kyoto University invites applications for a permanent Professor position.

Location: Research Center for Earthquake Hazards, Seismic and Volcanic Hazards Mitigation Research Group, Disaster Prevention Research Institute, Kyoto University, Gokasho, Uji, Kyoto 611-0011, Japan (at home or other places if University allows or orders to work remotely).

Job description and required qualifications:

The appointed professor is required to conduct research to analyze a large volume of seismic observation data and other information using innovative ideas and methods drawing on their previous research accomplishments to elucidate the seismogenic environment, including subsurface structure and stress distribution, and the earthquake source processes, with the aim of contributing to improving the dissemination of information based on the monitoring of crustal activity. The candidate is expected to be responsible for collecting seismic observation data at the Research Center for Earthquake Hazards, as well as examining the optimization of seismic observation data and information necessary for earthquake disaster mitigation. The candidate is also expected to play a leading role within the research community in the distribution of seismic observation data from across Japan, including those collected by the Center, and the open sharing of such data and information. In addition, the candidate will have responsibility for education in the Division of Earth and Planetary Sciences, Graduate School of Science, Kyoto University. The candidate must hold a Ph.D. or equivalent degree and be proficient in Japanese.
