

Chisato Saito

Chisato Saito is an organized administrative professional with more than 12 years' experience working at a funding agency and universities. Before joining Kyoto University, she worked from 2012 to 2017 at the Tokyo Institute of Technology, where she played a central role in managing large-scale international research projects at world-class centers. Prior to that, she was in charge of international affairs at the Japan Society for the Promotion of Science (JSPS). She received MA in British Cultural Studies from the University of Warwick, UK, and Master of Human and Environmental Studies and Bachelor of Integrated Human Studies from Kyoto University. In her spare time, she enjoys practicing calligraphy and foreign languages.